

Feeding frenzy! The food-hall craze hits Miami

By Hana R. Alberts

April 18, 2018 | 10:22am

In Brickell (just south of Downtown), two Italian extravaganzas — La Centrale and Casa Tua Cucina — opened in February and this past December, respectively, in the area's major new mall, Brickell City Centre. The former is a 40,000-square-foot market with 14 eateries and bars across three levels; Eataly-style, it includes places where you can purchase imported ingredients. The latter, meanwhile, is Saks Fifth Avenue's first food hall, a collaboration with the elite Miami Beach restaurant, hotel and club Casa Tua. Built over 18,000 square feet at a cost of $15 million, Casa Tua Cucina offers 10 dining stations, a full bar, a flower market and a home-goods shop.

4 | 6

La Centrale
Dillon Burke