The food hall trend that has been sweeping across the country for the past few years is now a part of everyday life. From the Bay Area to South Beach, galleries of gastronomy, serving gourmet bites, craft cocktails and date night backdrops, just keep popping up. While it would be nearly impossible to mention every delectable food hall in the country, we've collected a roster of mainstays and soon-to-open markets that our stomachs can't stop thinking about.

Just a block over from Casa Tua Cucina, you'll find more garlic-flavored deliciousness at La Centrale. The 40,000-square-foot, three-level destination features 14 different eateries and five bars. The first floor of Miami's largest food hall has the look of a traditional piazza and serves casual breakfast, lunch and dinner options. The second floor houses three sit-down establishments: Carne, Pesce and Stagionale. The third floor lures in vino lovers with its wine shop, event space and cooking studio.
